

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
Rebecca O'Meara
publicity@pyropublishing.com
(504) 861-2188

Allan Kahane's Fire with Fire Ignites Controversy with a New York Financier Tracking the Jihad to the Mullahs of Iran to Exact Revenge!

Kahane, an international businessman with global interests, uses his faction thriller Fire With Fire to explore the consequences of terror on both personal and political levels. "To fight a determined and ruthless enemy, one has to have equal determination and superior tactics. One needs to display power, and measured ruthlessness"—all characteristics portrayed in the protagonist Jake Burke. Kahane takes you into the mind of a terrorist strategist and explores the reality of another catastrophic event here in the United States—the exhilaration of victory, when tables are turned on the jihad's leaders.

When 9/11 happened, Kahane himself was on board an American Airlines jet at LaGuardia airport—with doors closed, ready to depart. Ironically, when the captain announced that the flight wouldn't be leaving, he was seated in the first row of the plane, holding his thick research file on Osama Bin Laden.

"When Kahane started writing Fire with Fire he wanted to introduce readers to the very real possibilities of what can still take place here in America. He was more determined than ever after the World Trade Center attacks and developed the novel from his own personal experiences to explore a smart, proactive and aggressive stance against terrorism as the only possibility for effective resolution of this unhappy period in human history," says Pyro Publishing's Kenneth Atchity, who is planning to produce the film.

Pyro Publishing is an independent book publisher focusing on controversial topics, too hot for traditional publishers. "We provide a forum for voices that otherwise might remain silent. Pyro looks for controversial fiction as well as controversial nonfiction that major publishers find politically difficult to distribute. "We trust the reading public's demand for multiple angles on important subjects, and believe that ultimate hope lies in opening communication to all points of view and analyzing where they may lead us. If both hawks and doves are provoked by this book, we will have succeeded in raising the level of dialogue to the point where the informed citizen may have an impact on government decisions." Atchity said.

FIRE WITH FIRE. Allan Kahane. ISBN 0-9785202-0-3. Pyro Publishing. First Run 30,000 copies. October 2006. Fact-Fiction; 334 pages; 6 X 9; hardcover. $24.95 U.S.; $25.95 Canadian. Distributed by Ingram. <http://www.firewithfire.info> <http://www.pyropublishing.com>